Candice is a seasoned lawyer specializing in advertising, consumer protection, and regulatory law. With a unique combination of hands-on brand experience and sharp legal insight, she offers strategic, practical solutions that help businesses innovate, build strong customer relationships, and navigate the ever-changing regulatory environment.

Her expertise spans a wide range of industries, including food and beverage, alcohol, apparel, consumer goods, pet food and products, veterinary health, financial services, and more. Candice frequently advises clients on matters such as product labeling, advertising and marketing campaigns, pricing, contests, sponsorships, influencer marketing, greenwashing, loyalty programs, advertising to children, e-commerce, French language laws, unfair competition, Canada's Anti-Spam Legislation (CASL), and supply and distribution agreements. She also represents clients in complex cases before the Canadian Competition Bureau and Ad Standards Canada.

With over a decade of experience as in-house counsel for some of the world's most renowned brands, Candice excels at simplifying legal complexities and guiding clients through the development of legally compliant strategies that minimize risk.

Whether handling high-profile brand partnerships or providing insightful legal commentary, Candice's proven track record demonstrates her ability to protect and enhance her clients' interests, even in the face of a dynamic and evolving market.
