Cassandre is an articling student in the firm's Privacy group. She supports lawyers in providing strategic advice on cybersecurity, data protection and regulatory compliance. She also helps analyze legal issues related to information security and emerging technologies. Through her graduate studies, she gained a deeper understanding of the legal aspects of artificial intelligence and biometrics, which she would like to develop into a specialization.

During her studies at the University of Montréal, Cassandre was a member of the Carabins downhill skiing team. Even though she was on the slopes full-time, her academic commitment was recognized through numerous distinctions.
